

Discover Granada

• Nobody can forget the first time they saw the Alhambra (1), a place that is unique in the world: the fantasy of sultans who wished to recreate paradise in Granada. Close your eyes in the Patio de los Arrayanes (2) [Courtyard of the Myrtles] or in the Patio de los Leones (3) [Courtyard of the Lions] and you will feel how it was made with light, water and perfume, along with marble, plaster and ceramic tiles. This inspiring walk ends in the gardens of the Generalife (4), lavish in its vegetation and freshness.

The Catholic Monarchs also wished to create something grand in this city and they commissioned the most beautiful Cathedral (5) of their reign, as a symbol of Christianity and in an attempt to be on a par with the spectacular Moorish monuments, as well as the Capilla Real (6) [Royal Chapel] where the two monarchs are laid to rest, alongside their daughter Joanna and her husband, Philip the Handsome. Just a stone's throw away you will find the café terraces of the Plaza Bib-Rambla, the busy market area of the Alcaicería (8) and the Corral del Carbón (7), another example of Moorish architectural splendour and of how Granada fills its monuments and historic legacy with life.

In the grounds of the Alhambra, you may visit the Museum of Fine Arts and the Museum of the Alhambra

Close to the Cathedral, the Monastery of San Jerónimo, where the Gran Capitán [Gonzalo Fernández de Córdoba] is buried, preserves a magnificent altarpiece in its high altar. And it is indeed worth visiting the Monastery of la Cartuja (9)

—there are buses from the city centre— as its tabernacle is possibly the greatest masterpiece of the Spanish Baroque style.

Strolling about

• Granada is best discovered if you visit on foot, wandering and enjoying the light, the views and the constant surprises. Start at Plaza Nueva (1) and go the length of the Carrera del Darro (3) and the Paseo de los Tristes (4), alongside the River Darro, in a charming succession of bridges, convents and palatial houses, at the foot of the Alhambra hill. The Real Chancillería [Royal Chancellery], the Church of Santa Ana (2), the Bañuelo [Arab Baths], the Cadí Bridge or the House of Zafra (8) are well worth stopping at.

For a genuine ramble, nothing beats the labyrinth of the Albaicín (5), and you will immediately see why it is a World Heritage Site. There is magic in every corner, and you can easily lose yourself amid its small squares, "carmens" (typical Andalusian houses with a garden) and astounding views. The most usual place to admire the Alhambra is from the Mirador de San Nicolás (6) [one of the best viewpoints], but you can also choose your own personal spot.

And another stroll, which in itself is a destination, will take you to the Sacromonte (7), an area filled with pathways, prickly pear bushes and spectacular viewpoints, replete with true flavour and a flamenco feel. You will just love its cave-homes and its curious landscape. On the top of the neighbourhood we can visit the Sacromonte Abbey where we can enjoy the peace of this area while admiring spectacular views.

Treat yourself to an afternoon in the Realejo district: you will come across the Carmen de los Mártires and the Carmen de la Fundación Rodríguez Acosta, among other treasures, both harbouring two of the prettiest and delightful gardens in the whole city. As you stroll downhill and towards the centre, you are within reach of many other interesting places: the small Square of the Lavadero de la Puerta del Sol, the Campo del Príncipe, or the Cuarto Real de Santo Domingo (9).
